

MY WEEKEND

What does a weekend mean to you?

Nothing special. Since I am a writer and enjoy the liberty of freedom, it is like any normal day. Though the psychological exhilaration at the end of a week induces a strange high.

How do you visualise a perfect weekend?

For "one who has been long in city pent", the green pastures seem the obvious choice. I consider myself privileged as I have a house in Santiniketan. I would have liked to go there every weekend, but I can only make it once a month.

Does the concept of a weekend bash appeal to you?

I am not a party animal. Once in a while, I have friends over and we indulge in talk for long hours. I wish the weekend was longer, not just limited to two days. People need space and time to unwind. They are too caught up in the mad race.

Normally, what keeps you occupied on weekends?

Again, there is nothing specific. My writing, which is primarily my occupation, does not have to keep pace with the rest of the world. However, appointments and meetings do come up.

Any favourite restaurant or place you like frequenting on such days?

When in Kolkata, I like going to the Lake Club because of its open-air sitting arrangement. Otherwise no such favourite haunts.
